
ABOUT THE EDITORS

Beryl Hugen received a BA from Calvin College, a MSW from Western Michigan University, and a PhD from the University of Kansas. He is professor of social work and practicum coordinator in the Department of Social Work and Sociology at Calvin College in Grand Rapids, Michigan. He has served as a board member and publications editor for the North American Association of Christians in Social Work. He has published papers on mental health, the integration of Christian faith and social work practice, and social work history. He is co-editor of Spirituality Within Religious Traditions in Social Work Practice (Brooks Cole, 2001) and Spirituality and Religion in Social Work Practice: Decision Cases with Teaching Notes (Council on Social Work Education, 2002). Currently he is a research associate for the project Service and Faith: The Impact on Christian Faith and Congregational Life of Organized Community Caring (Lilly Endowment, Inc., 2000).

T. Laine Scales earned her BA at University of North Carolina, MSW at Carver School of Church Social Work, and PhD at University of Kentucky. She is Assistant Professor of Social Work at Baylor University, Waco, Texas. Dr. Scales has published in the areas of social welfare history, spirituality and religion in social work, and rural social work. She is author of All That Fits a Woman: Training Southern Baptist Women for Charity and Mission, 1907-1926 (Mercer University Press, 2000). She is co-editor of Spirituality and Religion in Social Work Practice: Decision Cases with Teaching Notes (Council on Social Work Education, 2002) and of Asset-Building to Sustain Rural Communities (Brooks Cole, forthcoming 2003). She is co-leading a research team studying the role of Latina women in congregations in the USA and Mexico. Dr. Scales is a member of the Publications Consortium of the North American Association of Christians in Social Work and has held leadership positions in the National Association of Social Workers, Texas Chapter.

ABOUT THE CONTRIBUTORS

Katherine Amato-von Hemert received a BA in History/Women Studies/Drama from Lake Forest College, a MA in General Studies in the Humanities, and a MA and PhD from the School of Social Services Administration, University of Chicago. She served on the faculty of the College of Social Work, University of Kentucky, and as an adjunct Professor at Lexington Theological Seminary. Presently, Dr. Amato-von Hemert is living in Denver, Colorado. Her professional interests are researching the intersection of Christian congregation life and social service policy and program, the Medieval and Reformation history of poverty and social responses to it, along with the variety of religious influences in the history of the social work profession.

Gary R. Anderson received a BRE from Cornerstone University (Grand Rapids, Michigan), a MSW from the University of Michigan, and PhD from the School of Social Service Administration at the University of Chicago. Presently, he is a Professor and the Director of the School of Social Work at Michigan State University. He has social work practice experience as a child protective service worker. He has published extensively in the areas of child welfare, ethics, and health care. He is the Editor of the journal Child Welfare.

Cheryl K. Brandsen earned a BA from Calvin College, a MSW from the University of Michigan, and PhD from Michigan State University. Presently she is Professor of Sociology and Social Work at Calvin College and director of the Social Work program. Her research and practice interests are in gerontology, and specifically, end-of-life care. She is co-chair of the Social Work Research Group of the Michigan Partnership for the Advancement of End-of-Life care, a Robert Wood Johnson-funded initiative, and project director for the Hartford Geriatric Enrichment in Social Work Education at Calvin College.

Rick Chamiec-Case earned a BA in Philosophy from Wheaton College, a MAR in Religion from Yale Divinity School, and a MSW from the School of Social Work at the University of Connecticut. He worked for a number of years as Senior Vice President at ARI of Connecticut, whose mission it is to provide homes, jobs, and opportunities for people with disabilities and their families. He has several previous practice experiences in administering clinical, case management, quality assurance, family support, staff training, and management information services for people with disabilities like mental retardation. He has written and presented at conferences on various topics addressing the integration of faith with various management and disability issues. He has been the Executive Director of the North American Association of Christians in Social Work since 1997.

Roger D. Fallot received a BA (in Culture and Behavior), MS, and PhD (both in clinical psychology) from Yale University. His MDiv is from the Iliff School of Theology. He is currently Co-Director of Community Connections, a comprehensive human services agency in Washington, D.C. An ordained minister in the United Church of Christ, Dr. Fallot is also a member of the adjunct faculty in pastoral counseling at Loyola College in Maryland. Professional areas of interest include the role of spirituality in recovery—from trauma, mental illness, and substance abuse—and the development and evaluation of services for trauma survivors.

Diana R. Garland received her BA, MSSW, and PhD degrees all from the University of Louisville. She currently is Chair of the School of Social Work at Baylor University in Waco, Texas. Her interests include church social work, family ministry, and child welfare. She serves as Editor of the Journal of Family Ministry. She has authored, co-authored, or edited fifteen books, including Sacred Stories of Ordinary Families; Family Ministry: A Comprehensive Guide; Church Social Work; Precious in His Sight: A Guide to Child Advocacy and Church Agencies: Serving Children and Families in Crisis. In 1996, Dr. Garland received the Jack Otis Whistleblower Award from the National Association of Social Workers to honor her public stance against unethical practices of the administration of The Southern Baptist Theological Seminary.

David R. Hodge, is a Rene Sand doctoral fellow at Washington University in St. Louis and a retired member AFL-CIO. With an extensive multicultural practice background in the area of spirituality, Mr. Hodge has presented at national conferences, conducted in-service trainings, and is widely published. His scholarly work has appeared in Social Work, Social Work Research, the Journal of Marital and Family Therapy, Families in Society, and forthcoming chapters will appear in the Encyclopedia of Social Measurement and the 10th edition of Social Work: A Profession of Many Faces. To draw attention to his scholarly work in the area of spirituality, the National Association of Social Workers (NASW) and Washington University have issued national press releases featuring his work.

Crystal Holtrop, obtained her BSW from Dordt College and her MSW from the University of Iowa. Currently, she is a Clinical Supervisor and Marriage and Family Therapist at Catholic Charities, a community-based child welfare agency. As a clinical member of the American Association of Marriage and Family Therapy, Ms. Holtrop has 14 years of experience specializing in marriage and family therapy. She has conducted in-service trainings, facilitated workshops, and participated in the redesign of a two-county social service delivery system.

Douglas L. Koopman earned an AB in mathematics from Hope College (Michigan), a Masters of Theological Studies from Wesley Seminary (Washington, D.C.) and an MA and PhD in Politics from the Catholic University of America (Washington, D.C.). Presently he is Professor of Political Science and Interim Director of the Center for Social Research at Calvin College in Grand Rapids, Michigan. Previously, Professor Koopman was the Program Director of the Paul B. Henry Institute for the Study of Christianity and Politics at Calvin College from 1997 to 2002. His research interests are in Congress, American politics generally, and the intersection of religion and American politics. Prior to his academic career, he served on Capitol Hill in several committee, leadership, and personal office staff posts in the U.S. House of Representatives for fifteen years between 1980 and 1995.

Sarah S. Kreutziger earned a BA from Columbia College (South Carolina), a MSSW from the University of Tennessee, and a PhD from Tulane University. Presently, she is Associate Professor and Director of the Division of Extended and Lifelong Learning at Tulane School of Social Work. Previously she served as Director of Communications for the Louisiana Conference of the United Methodist Church and as a medical and psychiatric social worker in several health care organizations. Her research and practice interests are women's spirituality and religious beliefs; community planning; policy development; and social work administration. She was recognized as social worker of the year in Florida and has received several volunteer service awards. Currently, she serves on the Board of Directors of the Council on Social Work Education, the Board of Visitors of Duke University's School of Divinity and on the Foundation for Evangelism Board of the United Methodist Church.

Jill Mikula received a BSW from Calvin College. She is currently a Families First In-Home Therapist for Catholic Social Services in Grand Rapids, Michigan. Her professional experience includes direct practice in family preservation and crisis intervention. Other social work involvement includes instruction and practice with social work interviewing skills at Calvin College. Her professional interests include child welfare, adoption issues, international social work, and the integration of social work and the Christian faith.

Mary Anne Poe earned a BA from Vanderbilt University, a MDiv from The Southern Baptist Theological Seminary in Louisville, Kentucky, and a MSSW from the University of Louisville. Presently she is Associate Professor and Director of the Social Work Program at Union University in Jackson, Tennessee. She has served previously as a social worker on church staffs in Minnesota and Kentucky. Her research and practice interests are how to engage congregations in effective and culturally sensitive ministry in the community, what is the role of the church as an advocate for social and economic justice, and what are appropriate relationships among faith-based organizations, congregations, and other social service providers.

Jason Pittman earned a BA and MSW from Baylor University in Waco, Texas, as well as a MDiv from George W. Truett Seminary. He is presently the Coordinator of Urban Ministry in Detroit, Michigan, for the Cooperative Baptist Fellowship. He has social work experience in a variety of areas related to urban ministry and community development and was instrumental in establishing an alcohol and drug treatment center in Waco. Jason's practice and research interests include faith-based drug and alcohol treatment programs, urban Christian ministries, community development, and congregational social work. Baylor's School of Social Work recognized Jason as 2002 Social Work Graduate Student of the Year.

Lawrence E. Ressler received a BSW from Eastern Mennonite College, a MSW from Temple University, and a PhD from Case Western Reserve University. He is currently Academic Dean and Professor of Social Work at Roberts Wesleyan College, Rochester, New York. His social work practice experience has been in individual, family, and organizational counseling, and mediation. Professional areas of interest include conflict management, research, church/state relationship, and family counseling. He has held leadership roles in the National Association of Social Workers and in social work education at the state level, and as a National Delegate. He served as President of the North American Association of Christians in Social Work for seven years.

Amy L. Sherman earned her PhD at University of Virginia and is currently Senior Fellow at the Welfare Policy Center of the Hudson Institute, where she directs the Faith in Communities Initiative. She also serves as Urban Ministries Advisor at Trinity Presbyterian Church in Charlottesville, Virginia. She is the author of four books, most recently, Reinvigorating Faith in Communities [Hudson Institute, 2002], and nearly 70 published essays. Her work has appeared in a variety of religious and secular publications, including The Public Interest, First Things, Books & Culture, The American Enterprise, Philanthropy, Christianity Today, and The Chronicle of Philanthropy. She has written numerous “how-to” manuals for Christian ministry practitioners and is a frequent speaker at training conferences. In 1996, Dr. Sherman was named by Christianity Today as one of the “Top 50 Evangelical Leaders Under Forty.”

David A. Sherwood received his BA from Lipscomb University (Nashville, Tennessee), a MSW from Bryn Mawr, and a PhD in Social Work from the University of Texas. He is currently Professor of Social Work at Baylor University. His professional interests include the integration of Christian faith and social work practice, ethics, spirituality and religion, practice with individuals and families, and social work in health care and with the elderly. He has written several articles on ethics and topics related to the integration of Christian faith and social work practice. Dr. Sherwood is a co-editor of Spirituality and religion in social work practice: Decision cases with teaching notes. He is a member of the Commission on Accreditation of the Council on Social Work Education and consults with social work programs in Christian colleges and universities. Dr. Sherwood has served on the Board and as President of the North American Association of Christians in Social Work and is Editor of the journal Social Work & Christianity.

Ronald J. Sider earned his BA from Waterloo Lutheran University, and his MA, BD and PhD from Yale University. He is Professor of Theology and Culture at Eastern University and the founding president of Evangelicals for Social Action. A widely known evangelical speaker and writer, Sider's publications include twenty-three books (including the influential Rich Christians in an Age of Hunger) and scores of articles. Sider is the publisher of PRISM and a contributing editor of Christianity Today and Sojourners. Recent books include Just Generosity (Baker, 1999) and Churches That Make a Difference, co-authored with Phil Olson and Heidi Rolland Unruh (Baker, 2002). He and Heidi Unruh are currently working on a book on faith-based social services to be published by Oxford University Press.

Hope Haslam Straughan earned a BA from Samford University (Alabama), a MSW and Certificate in Theology from The Southern Baptist Theological Seminar (Kentucky), and a PhD in social work from Barry University (Florida). Presently she is the Coordinator of Field Education and Assistant Professor of Social Work at Wheelock College (Massachusetts). Previous social work experience has been as consultant to APERFOSA (Spain) around the establishment of an AIDS hospice, and collaboration with services to persons escaping prostitution, and to indigent persons with HIV/AIDS. Her research interests include graduate education for social workers around the issue of HIV/AIDS, spiritual development across the lifespan, and community and organizational collaboration. She is currently serving on the board of the North American Association of Christians in Social Work.

Scott W. Taylor holds a BS from Indiana State University and will receive a MSW from Baylor University, as well as a MDiv from George W. Truett Theological Seminary in May 2003. His work experience includes six months in India, establishing a program of Clinical Pastoral Education in a hospital setting. His professional and career interests are in international social work, with special emphases on global sustainable development, social justice, and environmental issues. He is currently a Graduate Assistant in the Baylor School of Social Work.

Heidi Rolland Unruh received a BA from Wheaton College, and a MA in Theology and Public Policy from Eastern Baptist Seminary. She is the Associate Director of the Congregations, Communities and Leadership Development Project at Eastern University, and a policy analyst with Evangelicals for Social Action. Her work includes analysis of church-state collaborations, research on faith-based social services†and evangelism, and the development of resources for congregational outreach. Publications include various articles, book chapters, and Churches That Make a Difference: Reaching Your Community with Good News and Good Works, co-authored with Ronald Sider and Phil Olson (Baker, 2002). She and Ronald Sider are currently working on a book on faith-based social services to be published by Oxford University Press.