- Stop Law Enforcement Violence Toolkit-This toolkit is intended as a resource tool providing some examples of organizing tools and strategies. It includes fact sheets, ideas for organizing, and sample tools created by other organizations, By INCITE, 2014

Specifically, the purposes of the toolkit are to:

- Integrate a gender analysis into our conversations and action around police brutality, the prison industrial complex, and state violence;
- Connect, support, and advance local organizing that addresses all forms of violence against women of color and trans people of color, including police brutality and other forms of state violence;
- Uncover and address the impacts of police brutality on all members of our communities, including women of color and trans people of color;
- Develop base building projects that center the experiences of leadership of women of color and trans people of color who live at the dangerous intersections of multiple forms of interpersonal, community, and state gender based violence, against them.
- Challenge society's primary reliance on law enforcement agents to protect us from domestic violence, sexual assault, homophobic and transphobic violence and other forms of interpersonal and community violence;
- Opposing Viewpoints: Police Brutality, Michael Ruth (Editor)
