NACSW Friend eNews - October 2018

"How good an pleasant it is when God's people living together in unity"
(Psalm 133:1)

January, 2019 Webinar on "Binding Our Nations Wounds"

NACSW is pleased to announce our next webinar on January 28th, 2019 entitled, "Binding Our Nation's Wounds: Developing an Ethic of Inclusion" from 1:00 pm - 2:15 pm (Eastern).

Christians in social work continue to feel "shut down" if their views diverge from peers, colleagues, and even family members. They also struggle to remain true to their beliefs, to deal with their own reactivity and judgment, and to avoid becoming cynical toward others who hold differing points of view.

Based on an integral ethics model, participants will explore the subtle ways we all get trapped in boxes of our own making that undermine our best intentions to actually be inclusive, and how to engage in more authentic dialogue with less fear and more confidence.

NACSW's Newest Online Training: A Conversation about Race

Stephanie Spandl, MAT, MSW, LICSW, SEP presents an online training entitled: "The Church without Frontiers: Accompanying Churches Welcoming Refugees."

Acting on the biblical mandate to welcome the stranger, Christians in social work have an important role to play in accompanying congregations that have committed to assisting immigrants. They can help bridge the goodwill of church members with practical knowledge needed to successfully assist immigrant families adjust to a new life and culture.
